Early Life and Education (2461–2477)

- 2461–2469: Born in Tacoma, Washington, after being left with the military, Eleanor grew up near a bustling starship launch and repair dock. Fascinated by the sight of ships soaring into the sky, she spent countless hours sketching starship designs and pouring over engineering texts from the local library.
 - 2470–2477: Excelling academically, she won science fairs and earned internships at engineering firms. On her 14th birthday, she was selected by the military for inclusion in a 4-year Advanced Sciences and Technologies Program. Here, she clashed with wealthier peers who bought their way into the program, but her tenacity and brilliance helped her rise above the others.

Ground Engineering Crews (2477–2480)

- At 16, Eleanor joined the engineer’s corps as an apprentice engineer, specializing in field repair and equipment modification, all while remaining in the ASTP, her education funded in full by the military.
- For three years, she gained recognition for solving high-stakes problems, such as restoring critical systems during live combat and devising field solutions for damaged starship components.
- Her ingenuity and determination earned a reputation for innovative thinking and fearless determination. Her work ethic caught the attention of superiors, who recognized her potential for frontline deployments.

- To quote Eleanor at the age of 19: “R&D can have all the fun they want in their white lab coats and safe laboratories, but you can’t test every eventuality without being on the ground”.

Recon Element Deployment (2480–2483)

- 2480: At 19, Eleanor transitioned to a recon element. Her precision with a long-range rifle and her ability to extract teammates from dangerous situations earned her the callsign “Archangel”.
 - 2480–2482: During her early missions, she forged strong camaraderie with her team, including Gabriel “Havoc” Renault, a charismatic demolitions expert, and Damien “Viper” Thorne, a stealthy marksman with a sharp wit. Damien and Eleanor developed a competitive rivalry, their skills often pitted against each other in both training and combat.
 - 2482–2483: The rivalry with Damien softened into a grudging respect as they repeatedly had each other’s backs in the field. Meanwhile, Eleanor began a romantic relationship with Gabriel, whose charm and humor helped her cope with the stress of military life.
 - Rumors of biological and chemical weapons being used during missions added intrigue and controversy to her unit’s reputation. Eleanor’s ever-present gas mask and involvement with Thorne who was known to use unorthodox methods fueled speculation about her involvement in classified operations.

Starship Duty on the U.S.S. Chara (2484–2486)

- 2484: At 23, Eleanor accepted a position aboard the U.S.S. Chara as a Junior Engineer, reuniting with Gabriel (now Chief of Security) and Damien (now Chief of Engineering). Life aboard the carrier provided new challenges but also a sense of stability.
- While on the Chara, Eleanor discovered Gabriel in an affair with another crew member, shattering her trust in him. Devastated, she confided in Damien, who became her emotional anchor. Their friendship deepened as Damien helped her navigate the fallout of the betrayal.
 - Damien revealed his own struggles with trust and vulnerability, leading to late-night conversations that brought them closer.

- The bond between them blossomed into a tentative romance, built on mutual respect and understanding. Damien's steady presence offered Eleanor the emotional stability she needed, while Eleanor inspired Damien to open up about his past
 - 2485: Roughly a year later, a Kiyan agent sabotaged the Chara's reactor, resulting in a catastrophic warp core failure. Eleanor barely survived, sustaining severe injuries that required cybernetic reconstruction of her legs, left hand, and lungs. She requested natural-looking replacements but opted to keep her external scars as a reminder of her resilience.
 - 2486: During her recovery, Eleanor endured physical rehabilitation and survivor's guilt. Damien stood by her side, offering unwavering support, while Gabriel attempted to evade accountability, falsely implying Eleanor's involvement in the disaster.

Post-Recovery Recon Deployment and The Arcturus Assignment (2489–2491)

- 2487–2491: Eleanor rejoined her recon unit to adapt to her new cybernetic enhancements. Despite initial struggles, she proved her resilience and solidified the respect given by her peers. Damien, who had also returned to the unit, became her closest ally.
 - Their bond deepened as Damien helped her navigate her post-recovery challenges. His quiet loyalty and understanding stood in stark contrast to Gabriel's betrayal, rekindling Eleanor's ability to trust.
 - 2491: At 30, Eleanor was offered a position aboard the Arcturus, a safer role as part of a critical deep-space mission. Damien encouraged her to accept the position, prioritizing her well-being. Before her departure a promise ring was exchanged, and despite their separate paths, they promised to find a future together.
